

Completing absentee ballot is on the top of the to-do list

To the Editor:

As a newly-minted college graduate, I am about to pack up and head out of town for a job in Washington, DC. One of the most important things on my to-do list is my absentee ballot. Given the current political climate of our country, I consider this to be a huge responsibility for any of us college-aged voters, as many of us will be away this November election.

In particular, I will be voting enthusiastically for Kitley Covill, candidate for county legislator in District 2. She is my mentor and my friend, but also a staunch advocate for people who need a voice. As a no-nonsense attorney who advises college students through Title IX grievance procedures, Kitley is both smart and deeply caring. It is not politics or partisanship that drive her; it is her genuine care for and dedication to our community. I admire her bravery for jumping into a campaign when our voices are being ignored — I have no doubt she will be a great advocate for all members of our community.
